Believe in your abilities

Learning shows our desires to achieve. Sometimes repetition and practice are key to your success. But the best place to start is at the beginning.

Real achievement in making jewellery can be measured in the following attributes:

SPEED: the rate of any action, achieved through repetition and practice.

ACCURACY: quality, precision, control also achieved through repetition and practice.

CONFIDENCE IN YOURSELF: building on your achievements brings resilience, through familiarity of technique and in belief of one's own abilities.

TRUST: in the process and having a firm believer in those near to you for guidance and support.

DISCIPLINE: developing self-control in the use of the jeweller's tools and equipment. Discipline reinforces achievement; allowing you to succeed in the make of your designs.

Where-ever your creative storms may take you, we believe in your ability to make jewellery.

Learn to recognise your creative strengths and weaknesses to build on your own practice. At the Jewellers Collective workshop, we are here to support you 100%.
