

JEWELLERS COLLECTIVE

The Jewellers Collective encourages active participation to obtain greater insights into the making of your designs.

Often various aspects of learning and making are only inhibited by our experiences at the bench. The process may take you in different directions, as you support what you want too achieve in your designs. The development of skill, problem solving & critical thinking are essential and whole-heartedly supported at the Jewellers Collective. Time at the bench is a key factor in giving yourself the best opportunities to learn, explore, collaborate. Make time to get curious and craft your designs with us. We happy to help & guide you.

We are deeply saddened by the passing away, in October of my Dad Peter Minturn, my best friend & mentor. Peter loved the years he spent designing & making jewellery for his clients, & then his years of teaching his time-honored skills. He was a talented craftsman, a person with the presence of mind and a flair for all thing jewellery. He respected & protected the indescribable miracle of skill transfer from one person to another, in the pursuit of jewellery making.

We cannot know what we need to learn today to prepare us for tomorrow, but with Peters insights and knowledge of the past, we have been well guided in our journey.

Shortly after Dad, we lost our beautiful little girl "Tui".

Our gentle wee dog that loved being on the couch, and with you all in the workshop. She enjoyed your company immensely. Sadly her condition had deteriorated too much, which meant we had to say goodbye. We miss her terribly.

Peter & Tui will always be in our hearts
